Here's a question for you: Has higher education become another great American scam?

I'm not talking about the rich getting scammed. They get what they pay for. They can afford to be scammed - they know what's up.

A lot of rich people send their kids to expensive private colleges hoping they'll get a good education that will lead them into their chosen careers.

But then there are kids who want a higher education because they believe a college education is their ticket to gainful employment and well-compensated careers.

For them, higher education is increasingly looking like a scam...

Penny stocks can offer huge profit potentials, but penny stock investing can also be risky when it's not done right.

This month's meteoric rise of CYNK Technology Corp. (OTC: CYNK) stock is the perfect example. It turns out the gains may be for naught as the SEC has suspended trading while it investigates the company.

Has higher education become another great American scam?

I'm not talking about the rich getting scammed. They don't wind up saddled with student loan debt after they graduate.

I'm talking about the kids who want a higher education because they believe it's their ticket to employment and well-compensated careers. They pay for it themselves, or their parents cosign on loans or take out personal loans on behalf of their kids' college dreams.

High-frequency trading (<https://moneymorning.com/2012/10/16/unless-we-act-high-frequency-trading-will-crash-the-markets/>) is fundamentally based on how market participants (for this discussion I'm talking about stock markets) place their orders to buy and sell shares and how HFT players act on those orders.

For every stock that's traded there is always (or at least it used to be "always") a "bid" and an "ask" price. Sometimes you'll hear the term "offer" or "offered" price, those terms are interchangeable with the term "ask" or "asking price."

By LARRY D. SPEARS (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/LARRYD-SPEARS/), Contributing Writer, Money Morning - September 1, 2010

Today's story "Classic Cons: 10 Financial Scams Fair-Minded Investors Should Avoid," describes just a few of the financial scams investors should watch out for. If you have reservations about a potential investment opportunity, or if you've been victimized by a financial scam, you might turn to one or more of the following agencies.

Better Business Bureau - With offices nationally, in every state and most large and mid-sized cities, the BBB can alert you to problems with local businesses, work-at-home programs, distributorships, sales routes you can buy and other one-on-one type rip-offs. They usually have lists of current online offers that are suspect or drawing lots of complaints. You can access the national BBB Web site at <http://www.bbb.org/us/> (<http://www.bbb.org/us/>) and navigate to your home state or city chapter from there.

U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) - Information is available on all securities-related fraud issues and investment scams, and you can file your own personal complaints or suspicions online at <http://www.sec.gov/complaint.shtml> (<http://www.sec.gov/complaint.shtml>). You can write them at: Securities and Exchange Commission, Office of Investor Education & Assistance, 450 Fifth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549-0213, or fax a complaint to 202-942-9634. You also can verify financials and regulatory standing on all publicly traded U.S. companies by accessing the SEC's EDGAR Database at: <http://www.sec.gov/edgar.shtml> (<http://www.sec.gov/edgar.shtml>).

Your SEC complaint can be anonymous or you can provide only limited personal data. However, the more information you give them, the more likely they'll be able to help you. Either way, include specific details about how, why and when you were bilked with any contact info you have on the fraudulent person or company involved.

By LARRY D. SPEARS (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/LARRYD-SPEARS/), Contributing Writer, Money Morning - September 1, 2010

When Peter Allen and Carole Bayer Sager wrote the tune "Everything Old Is New Again," they were probably hoping for no more than a Top 40 hit. Instead, the song became an oft-recorded classic, mostly because the title proved a truism in so many areas - especially in the seamy world of financial fraud.

Indeed, over the past 40 years, only one new entry has been added to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (<http://www.fbi.gov/>) (FBI) roster of "Top 10" investment scams - the very broad category of "Internet fraud (http://www.ic3.gov/media/annualreport/2009_IC3Report.pdf).\" The other financial rip-offs listed are merely new versions of tried and true swindles that have been around for decades or more - from Ponzi schemes (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ponzi_scheme) and pyramid systems (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pyramid_scheme) to phony stock offerings and commodity cons.

The big difference is that the one new category - Internet fraud (and the computers on which the Internet operates) - has greatly increased the frequency, speed and effectiveness of the other types of financial fraud, as well as exponentially increasing the scammers' take.

Bernie Madoff's guilty plea to a decades-long $50 billion-plus Ponzi scheme pretty much guarantees the 70-year-old will have his likeness immortalized on the Mt. Rushmore of scammers.

The former NASDAQ chairman's December arrest - with collapsing U.S. and overseas stock markets as a backdrop - kicked up a firestorm that has forced investors to take a much-closer look at who was managing their investments. Scores of investors have lost their life savings, retirees found their nest eggs gone and countless charities discovered that they were essentially out of business; the cash that they once handed out to worthy causes had disappeared.

Investing In Silver: How to Buy Silver Coins and Bars

By LARRY D. SPEARS (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/LARRYD-SPEARS/), Contributing Writer, Money Morning • February 27, 2012

For investors who want to capture the coming move in silver (http://moneymappress.com/video/mmp/mmr/mmr_silver.php?code=EMMRN244&n=MMRSILVER49501YR692YRTO79), buying silver bars or coins is still one of the best options.

Here's why...

Like gold, investing in silver is a great hedge against inflation and financial turmoil alike. It's why demand for silver is increasing at an astonishing rate.

TODAY'S MARKETS DJIA ▲ 63.34 (0.24%) 26,782.47

In fact, says Money Morning Global Investing Strategist Martin Hutchinson, "If silver were to match its 1980 peak, adjusted for inflation, it could climb as high as $150 an ounce (<https://moneymorning.com/2011/10/06/load-up-on-gold-and-silver-as-bernanke-dives-off-the-deep-end>)."

For savvy investors who hold physical silver in bars or coins, that move would deliver roughly a 328% gain from today's spot-prices.

Investing in Silver Coins

Of the two, buying silver coins is a bit more challenging because there are so many different ways to purchase them – including rare coins.

But while rare collectible silver coins are often attractive and sometimes bring in big prices when sold, their value is quite subjective, as they are tied to a number of largely intangible factors like scarcity, wear and quality of appearance.

Rather than becoming a rare coin collector, most investors would be better off purchasing bullion coins if their intent is to ride the silver bull market.

The United States Mint (<http://www.usmint.gov/>) produces several bullion coins in silver. The most popular is the one-ounce American Eagle, which can be purchased direct from the Mint in uncirculated condition.

At a recent price of $45.95, these coins sell at stiff premium to spot silver prices. But there's also a large aftermarket, where the coins trade at smaller premiums.

The same is true for the Mint's commemorative issues, such as the one-ounce 2012 Infantry Soldier Silver Dollar, recently priced at $44.95.

The Royal Canadian Mint (<http://www.mint.ca/>) also produces several silver bullion coins such as the half-ounce Year of the Dragon $10 coin. However, these coins also carry a similar premium when purchased directly from the Mint.

Despite the premiums, the guaranteed purity, beauty and liquid market have made U.S. Mint offerings highly popular. In 2011 alone, 39,868,500 ounces of silver were sold by the Mint.

How to Buy Silver Coins from a Dealer

All of these government-produced bullion coins are also offered by the major precious metals dealers, often at prices well below the original issue price.

For example, the American Precious Metals Exchange (APMEX) sells the Canadian Year of the Dragon half-ounce coin at a premium of just $1.35 over the spot silver price, depending on the quantity purchased.

APMEX (apmex.com (<http://www.apmex.com/Category/502/Gold.aspx>)) also operates its own mint, producing silver (and gold) coins in a variety of sizes.

The most basic AMPEX bullion "silver rounds" sell for premiums as low as $1.00 over spot, with prices adjusted regularly to reflect changing conditions in the global metals markets.

Other private mints that produce similar silver coins with competitive prices include Sunshine Minting Inc. (<http://www.sunshinemint.com/>)(SMI), Englehard and Johnson Matthey. Many of these mints also produce silver "blanks" – coins with no design or engraving – in various sizes, which offer investors perhaps the closest coin in value to silver itself.

Great article Larry, but it does not mention buying Silver via electronic auctions.

There is a large, thriving and vibrant market in precious metal bars and coins out there, with eBay alone reportedly transacting around half a billion dollars worth a year.

I built a decent collection of Silver Bullion coins and bars largely through electronic auctions over the last decade, and even built a software tool to help me find the lowest priced silver. This tool eventually formed the basis of our website which now helps users track and find the lowest premium Gold and Silver from a variety of sources including electronic auction.

Discipline is key to buying Silver at auction, and while there are bargains to be had out there, it is easy to get carried away bidding and pay over the odds. That is another reason to use a premium tool like ours to help figure out how much you should be paying and stick to it.

I agree with prior post; the article was a very good summary. In addition to electronic auctions, there are also live auctions around the country. There is something to be said for seeing and touching what you buy, particularly where condition is important. In addition to ebay (where misrepresentation of condition of collector coins is frequent), proxibid is another popular electronic auction venue for coins and bullion, where bricks and mortar auction houses have an electronic presence.

Jon, where can we find out more about your product?

Great explanation on the different investment options for silver and where to purchase. I agree that it also pays to look around and see where you can get the best price. The difference in mark up over spot can vary greatly between companies.

Awesome article. Very informative.

Today was a Cover-Up By the Fed and new buyers should not be afraid. what Bernanke attempted to tell the investment world today, that QE may not be necessary because of a modest improvement in the statistics of unemployment, if that was truly to be believed, then the stock market should have been off 800 points while gold was gold was down $100. Because the same thing moving the stock market is what's moving the metals and that is pure liquidity.

In the face of escalating trade war rhetoric, almost no asset has escaped selling.

The S&P 500 is down 1.5%, crude oil is down about 4%, gold is nearly flat, and the silver price is down 3.9%.

The price of silver has trended downward in the entire last month, but it's definitely not forever - and there are many reasons for this.

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/03/22/why-the-price-of-silver-is-still-climbing/>)

The price of silver has been in a holding pattern since late February, but the Fed's recent announcement was enough to push silver from $15.30 to $15.50.

Now, it's looking more like the silver price's correction has run its course and the metal is preparing itself for the next run higher.

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/26/heres-where-the-price-of-silver-is-headed-in-march/>)

The price of silver gyrated last week, exhibiting more volatility than gold.

It was a story of three steps forward, one step back, as the metal reached back above the $16 mark, but was unable to hold that level.

Like gold, silver prices looked like they had finished consolidating, before the end of last week. (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/26/heres-where-the-price-of-silver-is-headed-in-march/>)

This Technical Development Could Drive the Price of Silver Higher from Here (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/20/this-technical-development-could-drive-the-price-of-silver-higher-from-here/>)

By PETER KRAUTH (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/PETERKRAUTH/), Resource Specialist, Money Morning -

February 20, 2019

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/20/this-technical-development-could-drive-the-price-of-silver-higher-from-here/>)

The price of silver started consolidating in late January and continued through the past week.

While silver prices dropped a little lower late last week to the $15.55 level, they quickly reversed and have already come close to the recent $16 ceiling.,

And all of this has happened while the U.S. dollar index tacked on as much as 150 basis points.

Despite recent dollar strength, a dovish tone from the Fed may have capped rate hikes this year.

That may limit the dollar's rally and boost the silver price as we move further into 2019.

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/12/this-new-catalyst-should-drive-the-price-of-silver-to-new-highs-in-2019/>)

Since peaking just above $16 in late January, the price of silver has moved into consolidation mode. In fact, in last week's update, I told you not to be surprised about any pullback going forward.

So far it's been a pretty mild correction in silver prices, which have dropped from a $16.07 peak to their current level near $15.65. Still, the precious metal is up 12% since November and has held up well despite recent strength in the U.S. dollar.

The price of silver and the dollar tend to move in opposite directions, but there are exceptions. Here's how similar situations have played out before - and what to expect next from silver prices in 2019... By PETER KRAUTH (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/PETERKRAUTH/), Resource Specialist, Money Morning - February 5, 2019

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/02/05/heres-where-the-price-of-silver-is-headed-now-after-jumping-15-in-3-months/>)

The price of silver enjoyed a bullish uptick over the past week, so any pullback now should come as no surprise.

In fact, silver prices rallied 5.7% in the last 10 days of January, and a stunning 15.3% from mid-November.

A near-term consolidation in silver prices would not only be expected, it will be healthy as such dramatic gains are digested before the next move.

I fully expect that move to be higher for a number of reasons.

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/29/heres-how-the-price-of-silver-will-move-after-todays-fomc-meeting/>)

The latest action in the price of silver has helped confirm the newly emerging bull market.

In early January, silver prices twice tested $15.75 to close above $15.70. The second time they tested that level, they quickly reversed, with silver dropping back to $15.55, then gradually falling even further.

The DXY dropped off considerably last week, as investors turned their interest toward earnings season and began pricing in continued dovishness from the Fed.

That drove a dramatic rebound in silver above $15.70. Here's exactly how the price of silver is moving now... (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/29/heres-how-the-price-of-silver-will-move-after-todays-fomc-meeting/>)

January 23, 2019

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/23/3-ways-to-profit-as-the-price-of-silver-rallies-in-2019/>)

After peaking twice just south of $16, the price of silver has started to back off.

The precious metal put in a stellar performance in the two months between early November and early January, climbing from $14 to almost $16.

That was a powerful 14.3% move.

Now, we're starting to see some traders take profits and even rotate back into stocks, which have turned higher in the last three weeks.

With silver prices holding near their 200-day moving average and possible renewed weakness in the U.S. dollar, we could well see this precious metal return to rally mode before long.

And that could propel it to take out a key psychological level in the process. Here's how the price of silver is moving now, plus three different ways to profit from this silver rally in 2019...
(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/23/3-ways-to-profit-as-the-price-of-silver-rallies-in-2019/>)

January 15, 2019

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/15/its-official-the-price-of-silver-is-back-in-bull-mode/>)

These are truly exciting times for precious metals.

The price of silver has been performing exceptionally well, especially since late December.

That's when silver prices embarked on a string of higher closes for seven consecutive days. In the past, moves like this have proven themselves to be a strong signal that further rallies lie ahead.

Remember, trends in motion tend to stay in motion. So this can be significant for the silver price going forward. (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/15/its-official-the-price-of-silver-is-back-in-bull-mode/>)

3 Reasons Silver Prices Will Soar in 2019 (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/10/3-reasons-silver-prices-will-soar-in-2019/>)

By MONEY MORNING NEWS TEAM (HTTPS://MONEYMORNING.COM/AUTHOR/MMNEWSTEAM/), Money Morning - January 10, 2019

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/10/3-reasons-silver-prices-will-soar-in-2019/>)

2018 was a volatile year for silver.

In the last 12 months, silver prices have swung between a 52-week low of $13.95 to a staggering high of over $17.50.

While silver gains have cooled over the last month, there's plenty of evidence that the precious metal will climb to new heights in 2019.

(<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/08/the-price-of-silver-is-rallying-and-its-just-the-start-2/>)

The price of silver has been steady over the past week and is still up tremendously since late December. In fact, silver prices are still up more than 9% from their December low.

At this point, a small pause in silver's rise would not surprise me. The metal typically takes a little time to digest its massive gains.

However, after a brief pause, there are plenty of reasons to believe the price of silver will keep rallying in 2019... (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/08/the-price-of-silver-is-rallying-and-its-just-the-start-2/>)

Even just a quick glance at the price of silver is enough to alert any investor that this metal has begun a new rally.

If we look at silver's action since early November, there's a lot for bulls to be excited about.

Let's take a look at what the silver market has been doing over the last week, and why that's great news for silver prices in 2019... (<https://moneymorning.com/2019/01/04/heres-how-high-the-price-of-silver-will-go-in-january-2019/>)

(<https://moneymorning.com/2018/12/18/heres-what-could-drive-the-price-of-silver-higher-to-close-out-2018/>)

The price of silver managed to hold onto recent gains this week, despite renewed dollar strength.

Volatility has been soaring as the market's been thrashing around, with the S&P 500 down another 5% in the last five trading days.

Now, here are the factors that will drive silver in the last two weeks of 2018...

Silver Bear Resources is a mining company in Russia that will be starting to mine in June. Could anyone offer me some advice to let me know if this would be a good investment? Once they begin to mine I'm sure the stock will start to rise.

Well, the way I see it. How big of a production will the be doing? what is the companies history. If those two look good, then i'd heavily invest.

From personal experience don't buy mining results from dishonest oligarchs. Would you really trust someone in Russia to be honest in silver trade??

Some of the people who work for Silver Bear Resources are Canadians. I met Graham and Judy along with some other Board of Directors with the company at a Shareholders meeting in Toronto. They seemed like good honest people who are trying very hard to bring this mine to production.

Well, here it is now into Q2 2017. Unfortunately, the predictions fell quite short of $22 - $24 as Silver is currently trading at $16.42 and was as low as $16.20 just a few days ago. Personally, I waited for this dip to buy.

I have been collecting silver for 66 year. The lowest price I have paid is $3.25 an ounce and the highest I have paid is $23.00 an ounce.

I am 85 years old and have silver as a hedge against inflation.

I may sell some at $30.00 + an ounce.

Since I don't trust the Stock market as a Rigged game only for big-boys I learned the hardway that a quick profit has pitfalls. I had a slight advantage when Ford was way cheap and had sold out stock at $8.50 share. The C. I. Machine came in offered $9.00 share and Foolishly put my cash back into Ford. When he got through he bought 100 shares but in the mean time the stock plunged and he had control of my account for two weeks...Big Guys can write off their losses.... My loss was about 30%. So having seen this Korean thing back in November 2016 I pulled the trigger on silver. Bought my first 100 oz in March-May when the spread was only $1.20/oz. Then I watch sadly the price decline to $15.78 . I am buying as fast as I can right now. Next buy is 100 oz. and 40 oz /per month as I believe we are going to be in a war by January.

The silver system is so tainted and purely rigged for the rich to buy and sell on the short. If you don't hold the silver own you or stored at a legal place then really you don't own it but this selling and having a legal paper saying you have 5,000 ounces of silver but it is not stored in a vault by a company showing your name on it and documented or having it in person then you don't own no silver. This BS is set up for the super rich to buy silver on piece of paper then selling it when it goes up then when silver price drops again they do it all over, so Joe average who buy and store is a st...
