Can Faithless Electors Deny Trump the Presidency?

By DUSTIN PARRETT, Associate Editor, Money Morning - November 15, 2016

Faithless electors can still cost Donald Trump the presidency and send Hillary Clinton to the White House in 2017.

Donald Trump was declared the winner of the presidency last Tuesday by surpassing 270 electoral votes, the threshold for victory. While some votes are still being counted, Trump is expected to end up with 306 electoral votes.

But the Electoral College still has to meet to officially cast their votes, and faithless electors might vote for Hillary Clinton instead...

The One Chart You Need to See Before the Market Opens Today

By KEITH FITZ-GERALD, Chief Investment Strategist, Money Map Report • @kfgtotalwealth - November 9, 2016

It's 2 o'clock in the morning as I write, and the winds are howling outside, making it near impossible to sleep. Somehow that's strangely appropriate on election night, especially if you understand the implications of what I want to share with you right now.

But be warned. This isn't for everybody...

...just investors who want to make gobs of money.

How Many Electoral Votes Does Donald Trump Have?

By DIANE ALTER, Contributing Writer, Money Morning - November 8, 2016

Election Day 2016 is finally here, and the race is too close to call.

Right now, a key question is how many electoral votes does GOP candidate Donald Trump have?

Here are the states Trump needs to win in order to take the Oval Office...

The Only Investment Decision You Should Make Ahead of the Election

Who will win the presidential election?

Will it be the Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton? Or will GOP candidate Donald Trump emerge victorious?

You tell us...

How to Profit No Matter Who Wins Today

By MICHAEL E. LEWITT, Global Credit Strategist, Money Morning • @MichaelELewitt - November 8, 2016

This tawdry circus of an election has carved deep scars on the American soul that will persist long after Jan. 20, 2017.

But at least the contest itself is almost over.

The FBI may have closed its investigation into Hillary Clinton's use of a private email server, and Donald Trump may yet prevail when he answers the troubling lawsuits he faces, but the reputation of virtually every individual and institution touched by this election is ruined - the media, Justice Department, FBI, the candidates, their surrogates and supporters, both political parties, and those holding high office.

As of this morning, the so-called elite political class has disgraced itself on a daily basis for more than a year.

They'll be no help at all. We will be left to pick up the pieces after today.

The markets are finally realizing this, too; they're starting to react to the turbulence ahead, but they are dangerously, shockingly complacent.

So here's what I see happening with your money, whatever the outcome of this farce of democracy will be...

5 Donald Trump Quotes That Show How the Energy Sector Will Change If He Is Elected

By CASEY WILSON, Associate Editor, Money Morning - November 7, 2016

Donald Trump is proposing some of the biggest - and most controversial - changes to America's energy sector that people have ever seen.

We compiled a list of five quotes from Trump that capture how he envisions changing energy in America if he is elected president.

Why Keith's Post-Election Forecast Is Optimistic

By MONEY MORNING STAFF REPORTS, Money Morning - November 7, 2016

Markets have had their longest daily skid since 1980.

And Keith's post-election forecast predicts that this will probably happen if Trump wins the election...

The Election Is Weighing on the Markets, but Don't Worry

These 2016 Presidential Candidates Are Already Raking in Celebrity Donations

By TARA CLARKE, Associate Editor, Money Morning • @TaraKateClarke - September 4, 2015

The race is on for 2016 presidential candidates. A wide field of 22 hopefuls – 17 Republicans and five Democrats (Vice President Joe Biden is anticipated to make six) – are busy vying for campaign donations.

Many traditional big-time celebrity political donors have not yet made a contribution in 2015. For instance, nothing from actor Morgan Freeman so far. Freeman was the third-largest celebrity contributor in the 2012 election cycle, with more than $1 million given to Hillary Clinton's Priorities USA Action super PAC. And actor husband-and-wife team Tom Hanks and Rita Wilson, the seventh-largest celebrity donors that cycle ($173,231 to Democrats) are also yet to contribute.

But a few others have already picked their candidate favorites in the 2016 presidential race.

Here are ten of the biggest celebrities that have already donated in 2015...

History

Agora was founded by Bill Bonner in 1978.^[4] Agora began with one flagship publication in 1979, International Living.^{[4][5]} Throughout the 1980s, 1990s, and 2000s, Agora expanded to include publishing subsidiaries, real estate holdings, and restaurants.^[5] As of 2015, Agora's publications have around one million readers throughout the world.^{[6][7]}

In 2016, Agora, previously Agora, Inc., was reintroduced as The Agora. The company represents a private network for businesses that publish financial, heath, travel research, and analysis as well as special interest books and newsletters.^[8]

Operations

As of 2015, the combined revenue of all of The Agora Companies is around $500 million.^[9] Companies included in The Agora network have purchased access to the email lists of conservative politicians, including Mike Huckabee, Ron Paul, and Newt Gingrich, to advertise its products.^[9]

Companies

Each Agora company is independently operated. U.S.-based member companies of The Agora's network include Agora Financial, Laissez Faire Books, Stansberry Research, Common Sense Publishing, The Oxford Club, Money Map Press, Wall Street Daily, Bonner and Partners, TradeSmith, NewMarket Group, Institute of Natural Healing, Banyan Hill Publishing, and Omnivista Health.^[10]

Agora's non-U.S.-based members include International Living Publishing, International Living, International Living Properties, Agora Publishing UK, Agora Lifestyles, Fleet Street Publications, FSP Financial Services, Southbank Investment Research, and Port Phillip Publishing.^[11]

Books and newsletters

As of 2016, The Agora Companies published a combined total of nearly 300 books and over 120 newsletters through thirty-six publishers.^[5]^[12] Their titles include The Daily Reckoning, an email newsletter with more than 500,000 subscribers, and the UK-based investment magazine, MoneyWeek, which from January to June 2011 had an Audit Bureau of Circulation certified circulation of 47,366.

Authors published by the Agora companies have written bestselling books, including:^[12]

- Michael Masterson^[13]
- Bill Bonner and Lila Rajiva
- Marc Lichtenfeld^[14]
- Addison Wiggin and Bill Bonner
 - Empire of Debt: Rise of an Epic Financial Crisis

Litigation against Agora Inc.

In Ginsburg v. Agora, Inc., 915 F. Supp. 733 (1995),^[15] Agora defended itself against a civil suit claiming violations of state and federal securities laws.^[15] The court dismissed the complaint, holding that Agora, as the publisher of a subscription investment newsletter, was protected by the First Amendment against liability for factual misstatements.^[15]

In Lubin v. Agora, Inc., 882 A.2d 833 (2005),^[16] pursuant to an investigation into potential violations of Maryland securities laws, the Maryland Securities Commissioner served two subpoenas duces tecum on Agora.^[16] Following Agora's refusal to produce its subscriber lists, marketing lists, and other documents containing information identifying any of its subscribers, the Commissioner filed a motion to compel enforcement.^[16] The trial court ruled in favor of Agora and denied the motion, concluding that the Commissioner had failed to demonstrate a compelling need for the subscriber lists as required by the First Amendment, and that the demand for subscriber lists was overbroad.^[16] The Maryland Securities Commissioner appealed this decision, but the appeals court ruled in favor of Agora.^[16] In its opinion, the state of Maryland unanimously ruled the First Amendment prevents the Commissioner from compelling the discovery of the identities of Agora's subscribers.^[16]

In "SEC v. Agora, Inc., Pirate Investor, and Frank Porter Stansberry", (SEC v. Agora complaint, 2003 (<http://www.sec.gov/litigation/complaints/comp18090.htm>)), the SEC alleged Agora companies wrongly profited from selling false information marketed as insider tips. In US SEC v. Pirate Investor LLC (<https://sch> olar.google.com.au/scholar_case?case=1892468536221427083&q=SEC+v+Agora&hl=en&as_sdt=2003), 580 F.3d 233, 255 (4th Cir. 2009) the US Court of Appeal, against the arguments from publishing industry interveners, found fraud by the Agora company, and confirmed that punishing fraud, whether common law fraud or securities fraud, does not violate the First Amendment.

Despite being in business for over 17 years, Agora's child company, Agora Financial, currently has its rating suspended by the Better Business Bureau. The company is no longer a BBB accredited company, due to a high volume of complaints. The complaints range from poor communication by Customer Service Representatives, to false advertising/misrepresentation and generally include statements that the company has 'stolen' funds from subscribers. Agora Financial stated that the number of complaints seemed so high due to a recent growth in their company. As of 2019, there are over 300 complaints on the company's BBB page.^[17]

Agora Inc should not be confused with Agora Publishing (<http://www.agorapublishing.com>) which is based in Ottawa, Canada. Agora Publishing is a not-for-profit organization which seeks to empower writers to self-publish mass-marketable books. It has been describing itself as 'The Agora' before Agora Inc began doing so of itself in 2016.

Philanthropy

In 2002, Agora created the non-profit Roberto Clemente Santa Ana Health Clinic to provide low cost and free medical care to the community of Limon 1 in southwest Nicaragua.^[18] The clinic serves about 12,000 patients each year.^[18]
