Chad Arrington was all about community service. He volunteered with operation heart and Aaron Maybin to provide clothes and food for underprivileged kids at Hilton Elementary in Baltimore

Arrington gave away scholarships to students of alma-mater Randallstown high school as well.

- Arrington volunteered and spoke to the kids multiple times per year.

My Independent Research class here at Randallstown will always be one of the most memorable and influential moments for me. I researched the topic of affordable healthcare, here I developed an undying inquiry of the field of medicine. Over the past 8 years, America has struggled to come up with an affordable healthcare system for its citizens. This comes primarily from miscommunication. Communication between both parties may be a common denominator in many of our community's issues. In this case. Citizens are unaware that medicine is very expensive to produce and put out for sale. Alongside this, the government is facing the challenge that citizens simply cannot continuously pay large sums of money for their well-being. This issue is larger than our community, however, Maryland's healthcare spending numbers are higher than most states. With a prominent role in the medical field, I can serve as a liaison and a catalyst for compromise. At some point both sides must meet in the middle to find a solution. This ongoing issue comes from lack of information. With the power of a degree in pharmacy, I will have the opportunity to take on the task of helping in the process of determining a plan for affordable healthcare for Maryland and the United States. Using my knowledge of medicine, obtained from my years of schooling, I would essentially place myself in a position to inform members of our community about the real root of our issues. Also, my credibility gained from my degree(s) in pharmacy, would allow me to take things a step further and inform community leaders, politicians, and others who have power in the decisions made in our community, about ways to solve our ongoing dispute. The power of knowledge can change my role from a spectator to a gamechanger. I will make a change.

Dear Chad Arrington,

I am Blessing Dukuly, a senior in your alma mater, Randallstown High school. I am writing to propose my idea of how I, as young person can improve my community. While researching through lists of ideas of how one can improve their community, there was one I couldn't find amongst all those lists of things on the internet, and that one particularly sparked my interest, and immediately I started outlining points so that I don't forget about it. This one thing is 'me'. Let me explain what I mean by "me."

As young people we tend to easily be led astray and we get involved in things that will eventually hurt us and/or hurt the people around us. We are the future of the next generation and if we don't fix ourselves now we might open the doors to a more disastrous future for the generation after us. Therefore, the very first step every young person must take to help improve their community is to work on themselves. where I'm from there's a saying, "fix your own sore before you try to fix somebody else's;" what I'm trying to say is, as a young person, if I want to help improve my community I must first examine myself and my life, ask myself if my activities might potentially cause harm to me or my community.

We must realize that when we make bad decisions, like getting involved with drugs, alcohol, guns and violence we are harming our community, harming the people around us by making the environment unsafe for them and for younger children. If I am involved in drugs or alcohol and I'm not trying to fix myself, I will be hypocritical when I tell younger kids "don't do drugs." They might look at me and say "you're a hypocrite. How can you be doing this and tell us not to do it?" We can do every other thing we can to help our community but as long as we ourselves are not cleared, there will not be a long-lasting impact and the community will just go back to being as bad as it was before.

Working on yourself as a person is not just for your benefits, it is also for those closest to you. When you realize that what you are involved in is dangerous and you decide to get cleaned, take a friend who is also involved with you; encourage people close to you, be an inspiration to them and you might change their life for the better too. This person, in turn, might pull their friend out of trouble too and this becomes a chain reaction; little by little more people get impacted. After doing all of this, then you can do other things like volunteer to teach little kids, help senior citizens, clean community parks, help in fundraisers and whatever little thing you can do to lend a hand and improve your community with a clear conscience. Thanks for reading and I hope you find my idea useful.

Sincerely
Blessing O. Dukuly
